Teacher's Notes

- 1 b) He works in customer support.
- 2 Before his current job, Nils did a Master's thesis at the Defence Research Agency in Sweden, and was a student before that. He found his current job because one of his friends worked for the same company, but in Sweden. His friend told him they were hiring in Oxford.
- 3 The salaries are higher in the UK, and the tax rate is lower than in Sweden.

Things Nils enjoys	Skills needed
He meets many different customers	Making a good impression
There are different projects every week	Being analytical / solving problems

- 5 a) Just apply for similar things.
- 6 He means it's important to get started in some way, to create an opportunity for yourself within a company or industry. Suggested ways of doing this: applying for a job that isn't perfect, but is for a company you like; using friend or family connections to recommend you; volunteer to do work experience without pay, so that you become known by a particular company; send an application for a job even if there is no job advertised, so that the company has your name on file; attend trade fairs or job fairs and talk to people there in an effort to make new contacts.
